KNOXVILLE, TENN .:

The Franking Privilege.

The Democratic Senate recently passed the Post Office bill, sticking on to it, an amendment abolishing the franking privlege, but very properly the House struck out the amendment by a vote of two to one. The Democracy have all monies of the Government under their controlthey have the Post-Offices, Mail Agents, and Mail Contractors, and can circulate what documents they desire the people to see. They know that a majority of the present Congress are opposed to them; that this majority will ferret out an uns told amount of stealing, forging, and most revolting corruptions, carried on under the sanction of this infamous Administratien, and they are not anxious to have the facts with the proof, franked all over the country, as they know they will be, if this privilege is continued. When the Democracy had a majority in both Houses, which was for many years, and they could suppress investigations in their official corruptions, as they did-they not only did not repeal this privilege of the People, as it really is, but they did not attempt to do it, for then they could send out matter te suit themselves, when in and on the eve of the Presidential contest. But now, when the corruptions -nay the astounding frauds and robberies, of the immaculate Democracy, are about to be exposed, by a talented array off men, actually pledged to make these disclosures, this Democracy have become wonderfully economical; and instead of cutting of the frauds that have been practiced to the tune of millions, in the Publie Printing, Mail conveyances, Jobs and Contracts, they are trying to shield official thieves, and to imitate the British Government in the repeal of a mis called privilege, which imposes enormous labor and expense upon the Opposition members, in order to give the honest people light--for members of Congress pay for every speech, and every paper they frank home.

We are not surprised to find the villainous Democracy, in view of what is to come, seeking to repeal this privilege, but we are greatly astonished to find the whole Tennessee Delegation present, were drawn into the iniquitous snare, except NELSON and MAYNARD, who, like bold, fearless, and discerning men, met it and denounced it. Brabson was at home, on a visit to a sick family, or he would nave been found battling side by side with his East Tennessee colleagues. That there have been abuses in franking there can be no doubt. That these can be corrected by wise legislation, without abol ishing the franking privilege, there can be as little doubt. We repeat, the wonder is, that this measure should emanate from a Democratic Senate, when a majority of the House are opposed to the Administration; when that majority is pledged to ferret out the abuses and corruptions of the Government; and when the only means to thousands, in the interim, by which a knowledge of such exposure can be made known, is through the franking privilege, and members of Congress, for the reader will bear in mind that many honest voters, and patriotic men, are too poor to even pay for a newspaper. The Democratic idea that a million and eight hundred thousand will be saved is a humbug; for no mail carrier will transport the mail for any thing less than he now does, as he cannot know that members of Congress will not pay the postage on their documents, or that political parties will not raise a fund to do so, and thus force him to carry them, his mail bags being as much loaded as ever. Gen. Millson, a Virginia Demoerat, made a speech against this humbug of a reform, which we heartily approve, and will hereafter publish. Mr. NELSON, of Tennessee, also made a brief speech, which states the points, and which we most heartily approve, and will copy.

The franking privilege was first assumed by the Commons of Great Britain, in the year 1660. When first attacked by an amendment offered by Sir Walter Earl ocracy got the idea. At the same time the privilege was vehemently denounced by that great lawyer, Sir H. Finch, who called it "the poor man's proviso," and south, and in a neighborhood provision.

The Board resolved on putting the College out of debt, and in a condition to be useful, by raiseing a fund of $5,000; and since October last, the efficient and energetic Agent, nity of the House," while the Speaker, Sir H. Grimston, declared on account of its adaptation to poor men, he was ashamed to ask the House to vote upon it, as it Saturday Morning, February 25, 1860.1 ought never to have existed! The House of Lords demurred, and it became the law of the land. While the British Lords and aristocrats, were denouncing this poor man's privilege in England, they were abusing it, by members of Parliament sending to their families un. der frank, shoes, boots, coats, dresses, lace, partridges, haunches of venison, and even whole bucks! One member of Parliament, franked a whole pack of hounds from one country estate to another, by installments of ten dogs per day, still denouncing the privilege as intended for poor men and begaars. Now these Democratic Senators seek to imitate the Brit ish Lords, and Dukes! Still, they are the only friends of the poor man!

OUR Town.-We had occasion to ride through the most of our town recently, on horseback, and at almost every point, we beheld visible marks of improvement. New houses are going up, old ones are undergoing repairs-new fences are everwhere to be seen-and the town looks as if some one was looking after its interests, and realy desire its growth and prosperity

On our business streets, every thing begins to wear a cheerful aspect-our merchants are buying and selling and the indications are, that there is a revival of business with us. Our population is increasing, from the fact that we have no vacant houses. We want more vacant houses to accomodate new applicants, and we want more mechanics to build those houses. We have enough of business men without capital we want real working men, -men, who will not stand about on the streets, cut sticks and goods boxes, and go in and out of liquor shops like bees, complaining that no work is to be had! We want men who will take off their coats, roll up their sleeves, and show by laying hold of building materials, that they don't regard it as degrading to work for an honest living. Fops, up-starts, gamblers, drunkards, and poor white men, who are above labor, are more numerous with us, than are needed, and we would like to see these striking out for other
